Background information:

The Government Offices of Sweden have appointed an enquiry to propose new legislation regarding foreign nationals in Sweden. The aim of the enquiry is to give the Swedish authorities better means to identify non-Swedish nationals when checked within the territory, i.e. after they have entered the country. The investigation will also look into actions that could be taken to prevent the misuse of foreign nationals' travel documents and residence permits issued in Sweden.

As part of this enquiry, we are gathering information on the the above-mentioned matters are regulated in other European countries.

Questions

1. What is the law of your country on taking fingerprints of foreign nationals for identification purposes a) when they enter the country, b) when they apply for a residence permit (as asylum seekers or otherwise), c) when checked by the authorities within the territory, i.e. after the foreign national has entered the country? Do the authorities have the right to use any coercive measures?
2. From what age can a foreign national be subject to fingerprinting, and is the lower age limit the same for the three different situations as described above in 1 a)-c)?
3. What is the law of your country on storing fingerprints/fingerprint data?
4. What is the law on searching for, taking and holding a foreign national's passport and/or other identity documents when their right to stay in the country is checked by the authorities after they have entered the country? Do the authorities have the right to use any coercive measures to search for such documents when the person concerned does not present them?
5. What regulation is there to prevent the abuse of aliens' passports, travel documents and residence permits? (For example, are there any special requirements for detailed information/investigation when someone has lost such a document and applies for a new one? Is such information stored and analysed? Are there limitations as to how many documents can be issued for one person within a certain, limited period of time? What measures do the authorities take when they suspect misuse etc.?)

	Austria	Yes	1. a) For the purposes of border control, the police may take fingerprints of foreigners, if the establishment of their identity is not possible by other means. The police may also use coercive measures (Art. 12a para 2 Border Control Act). b) Applicants for residence titles under the Settlement and Residence Act above 5 years have to cooperate with the taking of their fingerprints (Art. 2b Regulation on the Implementation of the Settlement and Residence Act). The fingerprints of asylum seekers are usually taken if they are at least 14 years old (Art. 24 para 1 and Art. 42 para 1 Federal Office for Immigration and Asylum Procedures Act). c) The fingerprints of foreigners may be taken, especially if they have no right to stay in Austria and are at least 14 years old or if the establishment of their identity is not possible by other means (Art. 99 para 1 Aliens Police Act). 2. Please see the response to Question 1. 3. Fingerprints of foreigners may be stored especially in the Central Aliens Register (Art. 27 para 1 subpara 14 Federal Office for Immigration and Asylum Procedures Act). The general access to the stored data has to be closed as soon as the data are not needed any more. Two years afterwards, the data have to be deleted (Art. 26 para 2 Federal Office for Immigration and Asylum Procedures Act). 4. The police may search the clothing and containers carried along by foreigners if there is a suspicion that they have no right to stay in Austria and that they have relevant evidence with them. The clothing and containers of asylum seekers may be searched especially if it cannot be excluded that they carry along relevant documents (Art. 38 Federal Office for Immigration and Asylum Procedures Act). The authorities may take and hold documents which are needed for asylum or return proceedings (Art. 39 Federal Office for Immigration and Asylum Procedures Act). 5. In cases of loss or theft of residence permits as well as modification of identity data, aliens have to notify the competent authority without any delay. To verify the loss or theft, the alien has to provide a notice of the loss or theft. The notice of the loss has to be made at the municipal authority, the one of a theft at the police department. In the case of a modification of identity data (change of name due to marriage or adoption), the alien has to submit the corresponding documents (like the marriage certificate). The authority will issue the relevant document (e.g. residence permit) anew upon application with the primarily period of validity and scope of entitlement, if required, with the new identity data. In doing so, the requirements for a residence permit don't have to be examined again. The Central Aliens' Register –

			IZR – facilitates inquiries of all issued documents including biometric data (photo), useful for comparison. Moreover it is available to record information concerning lost residence permits as an additional specification. The misuse of documents (such as the usage of documents on behalf of another person) constitutes criminally relevant facts and will be prosecuted accordingly. 	Belgium	Yes	1. Article 30bis §2 of the Immigration Act specifies for which categories of third country nationals biometric data (including fingerprints) can be collected: applicants who apply for a visa at a consular post, applicants who apply for a residence permit and in the framework of identifying persons in irregular stay who were ordered to leave the territory. Besides, article 51/3 of the Immigration Act provides the possibility of collecting fingerprints in the framework of an asylum application or when there are indications the foreigner already applied for asylum in the past. At the border crossing point, it is the border inspectorate of the Immigration Office, in close cooperation with the Federal Police who organises and sets up the border controls and takes the fingerprints. (In Belgium only the airports and Eurostar station in Brussels qualify as external borders). Do authorities have the right to use any coercive measures? Applicants for international protection who oppose the fingerprinting are rather exceptional in Belgium. If an asylum applicant is reluctant towards the fingerprinting, it is clarified that an application for international protection implies that the applicant is cooperative for taking fingerprints. It is not specified in the law what force or coercion can be used in order to take the fingerprints of asylum applicants. As regards the legal migration channels, if the person refuses to provide his fingerprints in the framework of a visa-application, the application can be rejected (inadmissible) on this ground. For what concerns the verification of persons apprehended on the territory, the police is authorised to apprehend a person in irregular stay and to identify the person (name, age, nationality), taking fingerprints and photographs and to seize the documents the person is carrying. Article 74/7 of the Immigration Act prescribes that the Police can put a person in administrative detention for 24 hours for identification purposes. This possibility to put a person in administrative detention could be seen as a “coercive measure” to convince the person to cooperate with the identification and fingerprinting. Furthermore, Article 37 of the Police Officers Act specifies that a police officer can use force, taking into account the risks that this entails, to pursue a legitimate aim that cannot be achieved otherwise. The law prescribes that any use of force must be reasonable and proportionate to the objective pursued. A warning should precede every use of force, unless such warning would make the use of force ineffective. However no legal provision prescribes in detail what “reasonable and proportionate” force could be used in the particular case of fingerprinting.

2. The Immigration Office fingerprints all asylum applicants aged 14 years or over. In the framework of a visa-application the lower age limit is 12 years.

3. Paragraph 4 of Article 30bis of the Immigration Act specifies that the biometric data may only be used to the extent that it is necessary to: 1 ° determine and / or verify the identity of the foreigner; 2 ° to determine whether the foreigner in question is a danger to public order or national security; 3 ° to fulfil the obligations laid down in the European regulations and directives adopted by the Council of the European Union. Paragraph 5 of Article 30bis of the Immigration Act stipulates that the storage, processing, management and transmission of biometric data is under the control of the Privacy Commission, in accordance with the Law of 8 December 1992 on the Protection of Privacy with regard to the Processing of Personal Data. Furthermore, Article 1 of the Royal Decree of 21 April 2007 specifies that the biometric data, collected in the framework of Article 30bis of the Immigration Act (see reply to question 1) can be stored for a duration of 10 years.

4. The police has the right to search for documents for identification purposes and to verify if the person is staying legally on the territory. Identification and verification of a person's identity by the police is carried out in accordance with Article 1 of the Royal Decree of 25 March 2003 on Identity Cards and Article 34 of the Police Officer's Act. Article 34, Section 4, defines the procedures for identity checks. This article 34 states that the identity documents may only be retained during the time required for the verification of the identity and must be returned to the person after the identity check. However, the duration of the identity check and the contents of the document depends on the circumstances, and of the nature of the submitted documents that may require additional verifications. A person's identity check also implies an authenticity check of the documents presented. The non-authentic, false or fake documents are the subject of legal seizure. The Immigration Office and the Office of the Commissioner for Refugees and Stateless Persons can not use any coercive measures to search for documents in the framework of asylum or migration procedures. However, for what concerns asylum applicants, Article 48/6 of the current Immigration Act states that the asylum applicant must submit all the elements in support of his asylum application as soon as possible. The new Article 48/6 §1 of the Immigration Act clarifies “all the elements” and now explicitly refers to the provision of all documents with regard to identity, nationality, age, background, places of residence and travel route. The adapted Immigration Law also provides that the national and international documents establishing the applicant's identity or nationality are retained during the asylum procedure and regulates the return of the documents (Article 48/6 §2). Besides, in the framework of the duty to cooperate the applicant has to submit the original documents as soon as possible. If there are good reasons to assume the asylum applicant withholds information, documents or other elements for the assessment of the asylum application the applicant can be invited to submit these elements without delay, whatever the information carrier is. The refusal of the applicant to submit these elements without satisfactory justification can be indication of the refusal to comply with the duty to cooperate. As regards legal migration and access to the territory, Article 2 of the Immigration Act states that the foreign national must be in possession of valid documents. For a person who is not visa exempted, this means a valid passport or equivalent travel document with a visa valid for Belgium issued by a Belgian diplomatic or consular representative or by a diplomatic or consular representative of another state which binds Belgium. If the person concerned cannot present these documents he will be refused access to the territory and can be held in a closed facility preceding the return (which could be considered as a coercive measure to convince the person to submit his documents). 5. The circular of 27 May 2016 on the coordinated approach and fight against identity fraud at federal and local level addresses the point of (multiple) loss or theft of the identity documents. The circular states that if the municipal official or official of the consular post finds out that the same person repeatedly reports the loss or theft of his identity document or passport and then requests a new identity document or new passport, caution is required and an inquiry is necessary whether the issuance of a new document is justified. The municipal or consular official has to be informed on the circumstances in which the document was lost by the applicants. Furthermore, the applicant must sign a statement on honour explaining the circumstances of loss or theft. Besides, the official should verify that the person does not use a false identity (including verification of the picture in BELPIC). The official can also ask specific questions to check the statements of the applicants and inform the police or Single Point of Contact (SPOC) for Identity Fraud in case of indications of identity fraud.

The police and the Finnish Border Guard take the fingerprints of asylum seekers. c) According to section 131 of the Aliens Act, for the purposes of identification and registration, police or border control authorities may take fingerprints of aliens whose identity is unclear. Do the authorities have the right to use any coercive measures? According to Police Act chapter 2 section 1 police officers have the same right to establish identity on the basis of personal identifying characteristics (fingerprints), if a person refuses to give the information about his or her identity and his or her identity cannot otherwise be ascertained. To establish the person's identity, police officers have the right to apprehend anyone who refuses to give the information about his or her identity referred to in subsection 1 or gives what is likely to be false information, provided that the apprehension is essential in order to establish identity. Persons apprehended shall be released as soon as the necessary information has been obtained, but no later than 24 hours after being apprehended. According to Aliens Act 117a, interim measures may be used, if it is essential and proportional in investigating the person's staying in the country. According to Aliens Act section 121, if the interim measures are not sufficient, an alien may be ordered to be held in detention if it is necessary for establishing his or her identity. According to the Border Guard Act 35§, Border Guards may use coercive measures while performing their duties, including taking fingerprints, but these measures must be justified and in proportion to the level of resistance. 2. The Aliens Act does not specify a lowest age when fingerprints can be taken of a person entering the country. b) Fingerprints of asylum seekers and residence permit applicants are taken from persons who are 6 years old and older. c) According to the police, fingerprints are usually taken from persons over 6 years of age, but they can be taken from even younger persons for the purposes of comparing. 3. Apart from the EURODAC database, asylum seekers' fingerprints are collected in Automated Fingerprint Identification System (AFIS), the same system that holds the fingerprints of criminal suspects. In accordance with the Aliens Act section 131, the information shall be kept separate from the personal descriptions of criminal suspects. According to the Act on the Processing of Personal Data by the Police (1) Data in the Data System for Police Matters is deleted as follows: 5) aliens identification data is deleted ten years after its recording; however, if the data subject has obtained Finnish citizenship, the data is deleted one year after the file keeper was informed of the Finnish citizenship in question. According to the Act on the Register of Aliens Section 9 a person's data is removed from the Register of Aliens a year after the person has obtained Finnish citizenship or deceased. The removed data is archived. Section 3b of the Act on the Register of Aliens applies to the use and comparison of fingerprint data. The data captured for comparison purposes may only be used for the duration of the comparison and must be destroyed immediately thereafter.

4. According to Aliens Act section 129 b, the Police and Border Guard have, for the purpose of monitoring foreign nationals and provided that it is necessary to establish the foreign national's citizenship and right to stay and work, the right to obtain information from the subject of monitoring, and to inspect the necessary documents pertaining to the foreign national's identity, citizenship and right to reside in Finland. According to Aliens Act Section 132 the police or border control authorities, the Finnish Immigration Service or Finnish missions may take possession of false or forged travel documents, or travel documents intended for giving false personal data, held or presented by an alien. Police or border control authorities may conduct a non-intimate body search of an alien to take possession of a document held by him or her. According to Police Act chapter 2 section 12 when apprehending, arresting or remanding a person, taking a person into custody or carrying out some other action affecting personal liberty, police officers have the right to search the clothing of such persons and anything else they have on them and their belongings in order to ensure that they are not carrying any objects or substances that they could use to jeopardise their custody arrangements or to cause danger to themselves or others. In connection with an action affecting personal liberty, the person and his or her belongings may also be searched in order to find a document necessary for his or her identification.

5. According to Aliens Act section 137 aliens shall hand over their travel document to the Finnish Immigration Service before they are given an alien's passport or a refugee travel document. According to Aliens Act section 138, an alien's passport and a refugee travel document is cancelled if the document is lost and also, for instance, if the document has been damaged or any entries in it have been altered. According to Aliens Act section 60 g the recipient of a new residence permit card must hand over their previous residence permit card to the authorities. If the card is not in his/her possession, he or she must present a clarification on the matter. According to section 60 f, the validity of a residence permit card will end when the person holding the residence permit reports is missing or stolen. If a residence permit card is

			stolen or lost when the card holder is abroad, he/she must report it to the local authorities and contact the Finnish embassy. The embassy will decide on the issuance of a visa for the purpose of returning to Finland. If visa is denied, the person must apply for a first residence permit to Finland. According to Aliens Act section 134 § aliens residing abroad who have been issued with a residence permit in Finland are issued with an alien's passport for return to Finland in replacement of a lost or damaged alien's passport or refugee travel document. Aliens residing abroad may be issued with an alien's passport for a maximum one month. ▪ Are there any special requirements for detailed information/investigation when someone has lost such a document and applies for a new one? The person must report the missing document to the police and present a clarification on the matter to the Finnish Immigration Service when applying for a new document. ▪ Is such information stored and analysed? The information is saved in the Finnish Immigration Service data system UMA. The police or the border guard enter an alert on the missing document on SIS II system and record the information to the Interpol Stolen and Lost Travel Documents database. The police will enter information of stolen or lost documents also in the Investigation and Legal Assistance System of the police data system. ▪ Are there limitations as to how many documents can be issued for one person within a certain, limited period of time? There is neither legislation nor guidelines on this regard. ▪ What measures do the authorities take when they suspect misuse etc.? Different registries and databases are checked, and the person may be heard. If the police or Border Guard suspect a crime, they will investigate the matter. According to Aliens Act Section 132 false or forged travel documents taken into possession by the police or border control authorities are sent to the Crime Laboratory of the National Bureau of Investigation. Travel documents intended for giving false personal data may be sent to the mission of the State in question. When refusing a person entry into Finland, his or her travel document may also be sent to the authorities of the receiving State. Forged travel documents or travel documents intended for giving false personal data taken into possession by a Finnish mission may be sent to the authorities who issued them.
	France	Yes	1. a) Fingerprints of foreign nationals apprehended in connection with the irregular crossing of an external border are registered in Eurodac. Once transferred for comparison, these fingerprints are no longer kept in Eurodac. b) Fingerprints of applicants for visa and residence permits are taken. Regarding asylum seekers, fingerprints are compulsory as indicated in the Eurodac regulation. If the application for international protection is accepted, the Prefecture will take the applicant's ten-print fingerprints and his/her ID photo. The current chip of French residence permits include only two-print fingerprints and an ID photo. The current process does not apply to TCNs who have not obtained a residence permit. In this case only alphanumeric data (civil status, nationality, height, eye colour, references of the identity papers, travel documents and visas issued for entry, family situation and residence) are kept in the AGDREF application (French central database for foreigners' residence permits). The new computer system SBNA, which should be operational by the end of 2017, will change the existing mechanisms for collecting biometric data. Indeed, with SBNA it will be possible to keep full sets of fingerprints for all foreign nationals that present themselves (including rejected asylum seekers and persons with irregular immigration status who have been apprehended). Applicants for residence permits who refuse to be fingerprinted are not subject to any criminal sanction. c) TCNs in an irregular situation or who are subject of a removal order can be fingerprinted. If a TCN cannot justify his/her identity, he/she can also be retained for verifying his/her identity or his/her right to stay or circulate (as indicated in article L.611-1 of the Code on Entry and Residence of Foreign Nationals and Right of Asylum - CESEDA, articles 78-1 à 2-2 of the Code of penal procedure, article 67 quater of the Customs Code). Such process is decided by a police officer under the control of a prosecutor. According to article 78-5 of the Code of penal procedure and article L.611-3 of CESEDA, if a TCN found to be in an irregular situation or who are subject of a removal order refuses to give his/her fingerprints or ID photo, he/she can be subject to a three months imprisonment and a 3 750 euros fine.

2. For a visa application filed outside the French territory, fingerprints are not taken from minors under the age of 12. A Member State can fingerprint all fingers of TCNs or stateless persons apprehended in connection with the irregular crossing of an external border if the TCN is at least 14 years old (article 14 of the EU regulation n°603/2013).

3. France's data protection authority (the National Commission for Information Technology and Civil Liberties, or CNIL) has assessed the measures establishing the national databases VISABIO (for visa applications) and AGDREF (for residence permit applications). In its Ruling N° 2011-036 of 10 February 2011, the CNIL recalled that the processing of foreign nationals' biometric data was expressly authorised by the legislator. Such processing needs to be covered by strict personal data protection guarantees. The CNIL recalled that any biometric comparison potentially entails false acceptances and false rejections, and that these need to be taken into consideration when identifying individuals. The CNIL underscored that, given the specificity of fingerprints, it is important to carefully consider the proportionality of resorting to biometric measures with regard to the stated objectives. It also called for: the adoption of failsafe

			guarantees, so as to prevent any undue access to these biometrics; explicit alternative solutions in case collection of these elements is impossible; and a precise reliability assessment of the identifying elements stored. The CNIL furthermore observed that the legislative provisions did not describe the exact processes to be followed regarding the data capture and storage for biometrics. Finally, the CNIL specified that processing – through an automated, centralised repository – of data such as fingerprints, is only permitted if necessitated by very strong public order or security requirements. National databases collecting fingerprints from TCNs: 1. FAED (Fichier automatisé des empreintes digitales) is a national fingerprint database, created by a decree of 8 April 1987 and managed by the Ministry of the Interior, used for searching and identifying the perpetrators of crimes and misdemeanours, as well as for the investigation, trial and adjudication of cases before the courts. In addition, FAED makes it possible to ascertain the true identity of persons facing criminal proceedings or custodial sentences in order to avoid, for example, a judicial error, by detecting false identities and repeat offences. Moreover, the aim is to undertake identification through a comparison with prints left by unknown persons at crime scenes. 2. The AGDREF database, which collects information relating to residence permit applicants and TCN in an irregular situation, is administered by the Ministry of the Interior’s General Directorate for Foreign Nationals in France. It contains fingerprint images of ten fingers. 3. The VISABIO database contains biometric data of all applicants for long-stay visas. For short-stay visas, the VIS database is used. 4. The new computer system SBNA, which should be operational by the end of 2017, will change the existing mechanisms for collecting biometric data. Indeed, with SBNA it will be possible to keep full sets of fingerprints for all foreign nationals that present themselves (including rejected asylum seekers and persons with irregular immigration status who have been apprehended). This system will allow to verify the identity of the applicant when he/she collects the residence permit with the data registered at the time of the application. 4. Articles L.611-1, L.611-1-1 and L.611-2 of the CESEDA provide that: - any foreign national should be able to present documents proving their right to circulate or stay in France if requested by police officers. - If during a control, he/she cannot prove his/her right to circulate or stay in France, he/she can be driven to a police / gendarmerie office in order to verify whether he/she is allowed to circulate or stay in France. The police officer gives him/her all necessary resources to prove it and realizes the required verification. If the foreign national does not provide the elements required to assess his/her right to circulate or stay in France, after informing the public Prosecutor, fingerprints and ID photos can be taken if they are the only way to establish the identity of the person. - Competent administrative authorities, police or gendarmerie officers are authorized to retain the passport or travel document of TCNs in an irregular situation and give

			them a receipt proving their identity and on which are indicated the date of detention and the conditions for returning back the document. Body search is forbidden. 5. The loss of a residence permit is mentioned in the AGDREF database since some identity frauds are based on theft or loss of residence permits. Moreover, the law of 7 March 2016 on the rights of foreign nationals in France introduced a criminal sanction for fraudulent use of authentic travel documents belonging to third parties ("look alike"). Such fraud is subject to a five year imprisonment and a 75,000 euros fine. Lastly, the mission for the secured issuance of residence permits has implemented an action plan which includes in particular a tool verifying anonymously the status of secured permits. By entering the permit's number and the applicant's identity on a dedicated website, it can be verified whether the permit is authentic and valid (nor lost or stolen).

Furthermore, Italy also adopted the Regulation No. 2252/2004 regarding the removal and retention of fingerprints. 4. a) As foreseen by the Legislative Decree n. 286, 25th July 1998, subsequently amended by art. 1, s.22

The State Border Guard of Latvia may take a foreign national’s fingerprints to verify the identity of the person, when carrying out border check of persons, verify the identity of the person when carrying out the control of conditions for residing of foreigners and to verify the identity of asylum seekers (Biometric Data Processing System Law, chapter 3, section 13 7-9). a) According to the Immigration Law of Latvia a foreigner has a duty, if it is requested by a State Border Guard, to present all the necessary documents for entering the territory of Latvia, as well as allow their fingerprints to be taken to check their identity (Immigration Law, chapter 1, section 5 3). If there are suspicions or the fact of using false documents (passport, visa, residence permit) while entering the territory of Latvia, the officials of the State Border Guard shall detain such person, establish the identity of the detainee, take his or her fingerprints and his or her photograph, conduct an inspection of a foreigner and his or her property, as well as, if necessary, ensure a medical examination of the foreigner and draw up a report thereof (Immigration Law, chapter 7, section 51, 57). b) According to the Asylum Law of Latvia the State Border Guard shall take fingerprints of each asylum seeker to verify his/her identity (Asylum Law, chapter 1, section 7, part 1 2). c) When issuing a residence permit, the fingerprints shall be taken from all foreigners who have reached 6 years age. If the foreigner has violated stay conditions in the territory of Latvia and is the subject to removal or return procedure, while in detention, the State Border Guard has the right to take foreigner's fingerprints (Immigration Law, chapter 7, section 51). With a view to checking whether a third-country national or a stateless person found illegally staying within the territory of Latvia has previously lodged an application for international protection in another Member State, the State Border Guard has the right to take a foreigner's fingerprints (Regulation No. 603/2013, chapter 4, article 17). In order to identify the foreigner, if he/she is hiding his/her identity, the State Border Guard has the right to detain such person or apply one of the alternative means of detention due to reasons of humanitarian nature (Immigration Law, chapter 7, section 51). In the case of intentional non-compliance with a State Border Guard official's lawful order or requirement, when he/she is fulfilling social order protection or service duties, a fine could be imposed (Latvian Administrative Violations Code, chapter 14, section 175).

2. According to the Immigration Law the State Border Guard has the right to detain a foreigner, except a minor foreigner who has not reached the age of 14 years, and perform their fingerprinting (Immigration Law, chapter 7, section 57). Following the Asylum Law the State Border Guard shall take fingerprints of each asylum seeker who is at least 14 years of age in order to verify his/her identity (Asylum Law, chapter 1, section 7, part 1 2). The same is applicable to every third-country national or stateless person of at least 14 years of age who is apprehended by the State Border Guard in connection with the irregular crossing by land, sea or air of the border of Latvia having come from a third country and who is not turned back or who remains physically on the territory of Latvia and who is not kept in custody, confinement or detention during the entirety of the period between apprehension and removal on the basis of the decision to turn him or her back (Regulation No. 603/2013, chapter 3, article 14) and to any third-country national or stateless person of at least 14 years of age found illegally staying within the territory of Latvia with a view to checking whether a person has previously lodged an application for international protection in another Member State (Regulation No. 603/2013, chapter 3, article 17).

3. A right to take a third-country national's or stateless person's fingerprints is laid down in Immigration Law of Latvia and Asylum Law of Latvia. Biometric data processing system is regulated by Biometric Data Processing Law, which includes biometric data input, updating and storage, as well as use and supervision of this data. Data of detained foreigner's is kept in Automatized Fingerprint Identification System (AFIS) according to Regulation of the Cabinet of Ministers No. 99 (2009, 3rd February) "Regulation of the amount of included information and it's use in Automatized Fingerprint Identification System (AFIS)". Included data is actively stored for 10 years, consequently transferred to archive for another 10 years and finally deleted from the register (AFIS Regulation, article 10, 11). In order to implement the Articles 9, 14, 17 of Regulation No. 603/2013 Latvia has created a national Asylum seekers' fingerprints information system, which is regulated by the Regulation of Cabinet of Ministers No. 296 (2016, 16th May) "Regulation of Asylum seekers' fingerprints information system". Included data is stored for 10 years (for persons who meet the conditions of Regulation No. 603/2013, Article 9), 3 years (for persons who meet the conditions of Regulation No. 603/2013, Article 14) and until the conclusion of foreigner's fingerprint comparison performed by expert (for persons who meet the conditions of Regulation No. 603/2013, Article 17) (Regulation of Asylum seekers' fingerprints information system, chapter 2, article 10).

4. In Latvia, the authorities have the right to search for a foreign national's passport and/or other identity documents for identification purposes when he or she enters the country, as well as when controlling the enter, stay, emigration and transit conditions of foreigners in the territory of Latvia. An official of the State Border Guard has the right to seize the property and personal identification and travel documents of the detained foreigner by drawing up a report thereof or making a relevant record in the report regarding inspection of the property of a detainee. The documents shall be seized until the removal of the foreigner (Immigration Law, chapter 7, section 58). An official of the State Border Guard, when deciding the case regarding detention of a foreigner, may, due to reasons of humanitarian nature, take a decision to apply the alternative mean of detention - the handing over of a travel document and other personal identification documents at the disposal of the foreigner to an official of the State Border Guard (Immigration Law, chapter 7, section 51, part 3 2). In identifying an asylum seeker and ascertaining his or her nationality, the State Border Guard has the right to perform inspection of the asylum seeker and his or her possessions, and also to seize objects and documents, if they may have a significance in examination of the application or if they may pose a threat to the asylum seeker or those around him or her (Asylum Law, chapter 1, section 7). An asylum seeker shall hand his or her personal identity and travel documents over to the State Border Guard until the time when the final decision is taken to grant or to refuse to grant refugee or alternative status, except the case where the asylum seeker has another legal basis to reside in the Republic of Latvia (Asylum Law, chapter 1, section 8). Consequently, after the granting of the status of international protection all of asylum seeker's personal identity and travel documents are sent to the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs. In order to identify the foreigner, if he/she is hiding his/her identity with the suspected purpose of avoiding the removal, the State Border Guard has the right to detain such person or apply one of the alternative means of detention due to reasons of humanitarian nature (Immigration Law, chapter 7, section 51). 5. There is certain procedure of investigation every time the document is lost/ stolen that has been regulated by the internal legislative act. Latvia does not restrict the number of documents a person is entitled to change during any period of time.

	Luxembourg	Yes	1. There are different procedures for taking fingerprints depending if the third-country national is an international protection applicant or if s/he is entering the country with a visa. a1) In the case of an international protection applicant once the application is introduced the Judicial Police of the Grand Ducal Police will interview the applicant to determine his/her identity and to verify his/her travel itinerary, in accordance with article 6 (3) of the Law of 18 December 2015 on international protection and temporary protection. In order to verify the identity of the applicant the Judicial Police will collect the fingerprints

			and takes the necessary pictures (article 6 (3) paragraph 2), if the applicant is 14 years old or older[i]. This is done in order to find any elements that will allow to determine if another Member State is responsible to examine the application.[ii] Additionally, the EURODAC database is consulted to verify if the same person had already submitted an application for international protection in another Member State. It is necessary to differentiate between third-country nationals which cross the internal borders and who are already on the Schengen area and those who are controlled at the external borders by the border guards: - the third-country nationals, who request international protection at the border: the fingerprints are collected and are introduced in the EURODAC system by a border guard. The border-crossing checkpoint is equipped with the EURODAC system. Afterwards, an officer of the Judicial Police (Service Police Judiciaire/Etrangers -SPJ-ETR) begins the investigation. - the third-country nationals, who request international protection inside the territory: they are guided by the agents of the Police to the premises of the Directorate of Immigration of the Ministry of Foreign and European Affairs, where an officer of the Judicial Police begins the investigation. a2) The third-country national who applies for a short-term visa will be subject to the Visa code. The VIS roll-out has been completed in February 2016 and all stations connected to the VIS are operational. Certain categories of applicants have to provide their fingerprints when they hand over their visa request. An offline procedure has been developed in view of enrolling applications in case of a temporary disconnection to the main server. In order to be able to verify the identity, the collection of fingerprints and biometrical data is practiced in the diplomatic representation. The applicant will be compelled to give his/her fingerprints (10 fingers). With this new system, the biometrical data will be saved in a common database, which will be used to control the visa's holder identity at the external border. The border-crossing checkpoint is equipped with the VIS. The border guards can exceptionally, issue a visa at the external border to a third-country national. Who fulfils the criteria of entry and stay of the Immigration Law. b) when they apply for a residence permit (as asylum seekers or otherwise) When applying for a residence permit (international protection or any other type of authorisation of stay) the Directorate of Immigration will collect the biometric data (photograph and fingerprints) before issuing the residence permit in accordance with regulation no. 380/2008 of the Council of 18 April 2008. c) when checked by the authorities within the territory, i.e. after the foreign national has entered the country? If an irregular migrant is detected and placed in detention, article 120 (4) of the amended law of 29 August 2008 on free movement of persons and immigration enables the police to take pictures of the persons who have to be returned. The collection of fingerprints is allowed only if it is strictly necessary to establish the identity of the detained foreigner or for the issuance of the travel

			document. Do the authorities have the right to use any coercive measures? Yes in the cases 1.a1 and 1.c). In cases 1.a2 and 1.b) if the individual refuses to have his/her fingerprints taken the visa and the residence permit will be refused. 2. The minimum age is 14 years of age in the cases 1.a.1), b) and c). The minimum age for collecting fingerprints in the case 1.a.2) is 12 years. 3. In Luxembourg there is not a fixed deadline to keep personal information in the databases related to entry and stay of foreigners in the country. This database is mainly composed by the data gathered from the foreigners that apply to enter and stay in the country (especially with the authorisations of stay for obtaining a residence permit). Only the biometrical data gathered, that is destined to issue residence permit in accordance with Regulation EC n° 380/2008 of the Council of 18 April 2008 that modified Regulation EC n° 1030/2002, which establishes a uniform model of residence permit for third country nationals are kept in a temporary file. Once that the residence permit is issued to the holder or at the most six months after the issuance of the residence permit, the ministry will have to erase the data (art. 2 of the Grand-Ducal regulation of 19 May 2011 that modifies: 1. the Grand-Ducal regulation of 5 September 2008 on the execution of certain disposition on administrative formalities foreseen by the Law of 29 August 2008 on free movement of persons and immigration; 2. the Grand-Ducal regulation of 26 September 2008 on the creation of a database for treating personal data). 4. Article 136 of the Immigration Law establishes that a third country national has to present his/her identity documents that justify his/her entry and stay in the territory when requested by the Police. The Police is allowed to withhold the travel document of the third country national if he/she is illegally in the country. If the third-country national is not able to produce the documents or refuses to show them the Police officer can detain the individual or can take the third-country national to the police station in order to establish his/her identity (article 45 (2) of the Criminal Procedure Code). The verification of identity will be done by the Judicial Police using all the means at their disposal (article 45 (3)). The maximum time for holding the individual is of 4 hours which counts from the moment when the police requested the documents (article 45 (5)). In case that the police determines that the third-country national is in an irregular situation, they will notify the Minister in charge of Immigration in order that the Minister decides if the individual will be placed in detention (article 120 (1) of the Immigration Law).

			5. In Luxembourg the replacement of the identity card, passport or residence permit must be accompanied in case that it has been stolen or lost by a certificate of the Grand-ducal police. In case of loss or destruction of the identity card the commune will issue a certificate to the applicant but the identity card will not be renewed until the conditions of the lost or the destruction have been investigated (article 9 of the ministerial regulation of 12 June 1989). The same will happen if the certificate is destroyed or lost. In the case of passport or travel document of a refugee or a stateless person the certificate of the police must be presented (article 7 of the Grand-ducal regulation of 25 January 2008 that establishes the modalities for obtaining a biometric passport, or a biometric travel document for foreigners, stateless persons and refugees). In case the residence permit of a third country national is stolen or lost the concerned person must make a renewal request at the Directorate of Immigration of the Ministry for Foreign Affairs. A statement of lost/robbery must be made at the Grand-ducal police. A copy of this document must be attached to the request. It is evident that in case there is a voluntary destruction the holder can be prosecuted in court. The same procedure has to be applied to resident permit holders. It is important to mention that in Luxembourg there is a national identification number so it is easy for the authorities to know how many times a person has applied for an identity card or a passport. There are no sanctions foreseen by the law for constantly losing the documents. As we mentioned above the only sanctions that can be applied are the penal sanctions in case that the police discovers that there was a voluntary destruction of the document.
	Netherlands	Yes	1. a) The articles 106a and 107 of the Dutch Aliens Act hold legal basis for the capturing, storage and use of biometric data (10 fingerprints and a facial image). Article 106a refers to the categories from which biometric data can be collected, the purposes for which this is done (identification and verification) and the organizations which are authorized to collect this information. Article 107 contains a limited number of purposes which exceed the implementation of the Aliens Act and the Netherlands Nationality Act. Please see the following link for more information (in Dutch): http://wetten.overheid.nl/BWBR0011823/2017-01-01/0/#Hoofdstuk8_Paragraaf1 b) Biometric data in the asylum procedure are captured at first contact with the applicant in the Netherlands (by the National Police (NP) and the Royal Netherlands Marechaussee (KMar), prior to the decision. Within the context of legal migration purposes (i.e. non asylum or irregular migration), the collecting of biometric data is generally performed by the Dutch embassy or consulate abroad. Foreign nationals from the United States, Australia, New Zealand, Canada, Japan, South Korea, Monaco and Vatican City who intend to stay in the Netherlands for three months or more, are not required to apply for a regular provisional residence permit (MVV) upon arrival to the Netherlands. They need to apply for a regular residence permit in the Netherlands. If they do so, they must provide biometric data (10 fingerprints and a facial image) at the Dutch Immigration and Naturalisation Service (IND). c) All government organizations (including supervisory bodies such as the National Police (NP) and the Royal Netherlands Marechaussee (KMar)) charged with the execution of the Dutch Aliens Act, have the right to verify the identity of foreign nationals. d) It is compulsory for foreign nationals who wish to reside in the Netherlands to provide biometric data (a photograph and fingerprints). In the case of the asylum procedure, supervisory bodies such as the National Police (NP) and the Royal Netherlands Marechaussee (KMar) have coercive powers to compel the foreign national to provide biometric data. Other specific measures can apply. If, for instance, it is not possible to take fingerprints (in case the fingers of the foreign national are damaged), the above-mentioned supervisory bodies can impose on the asylum seeker the duty to report so that fingerprints can be taken at a later stage.

2. See above. Children who have not yet reached the age of 6 are exempted from the requirement of providing fingerprints. This applies to all forms of residence in the Netherlands.

3. Effective as of 1st March 2014, Dutch national legislation (i.e. the articles 106a and 107 of the Dutch Aliens Act) makes it possible to store biometric data (10 fingerprints and a facial image) of third country nationals in a national database shared by the organizations cooperating in the immigration process in the Netherlands (in short: BVV). Based on Council Regulation (EC) No 380/2008, of 18 April 2008, the Dutch residence permits of foreign nationals that are 6 years of age or older (the temporary and permanent regular residence permits as well as the asylum residence permits), contain a photograph and two fingerprints electronically stored on the residence permit.

4. Supervisory bodies such as the National Police (NP) and the Royal Netherlands Marechaussee (KMar) have the power to search for, take and hold a foreign national's passport and/or other identity documents. These powers are exercised on the basis of the Dutch Aliens Act and legislation which specifically pertains to these organizations.

5. Loss of these documents must be reported to the police. The foreign national must present this written report from the police in order to obtain a new document. The IND registers in its database if a residence

			document is lost or stolen. In case of a lost or stolen residence permit, the IND also places an alert in the Schengen Information System (SIS-II). This alert will allow the authorities in other EU-member states, such as border control authorities, to verify whether a Dutch residence permit can still be in circulation. There are no limitations as to the number of residence documents one can obtain. The IND will issue, however, only one residence document to the foreign national. If the foreign national still holds a previous residence document, the IND will claim and destroy this residence document. In the case of possible misuse or fraud, the IND will take enforcement action. In such case, the IND may invite the foreign national to explain his or her situation. If fraud is established, the IND will report this to the police.
	Slovak Republic	Yes	1. a) At the entry, it is possible to take fingerprints of foreigners only in order to carry out border control, during border control (it is regulated by the Act on Residence of Aliens). b) Fingerprints are not taken when applying for the residence permit, only when the residence permit is issued or when an EU citizen is being registered (also regulated by the Act on Residence of Aliens). c) Taking fingerprints in these cases (regulated by the Act on the Police Force and the Act on the Residence of Aliens) is carried out if the control within the territory is carried out by a Police Officer in special cases if the person does not cooperate, rejects to show one's documents etc., the Officer is authorised to take this person to the police station and if the person shows resistance, the Officer is authorised to apply coercive measures. According to the Slovak legislation (Act on the Police Force), the Police Officer is authorised to take from the person brought to the police station his/her fingerprints, examine his/her physical features, take the body measures, make visual, audio or other records and take samples of his/her biological materials. The Police Officer is authorised to take identification marks also from a foreigner who entered or is staying in the territory of the Slovak Republic without authorisation, or against whom process of administrative expulsion has started or the process of an entry ban or in order to determine the age of a person unless it is obvious that the concern foreigner is a minor. 2. At the entry to the territory of the Slovak Republic – during border control – from 12 years based on the Information System (IS) VIS. Irregular migration – national IS MIGRA – from 10 years, from 14 years if the person is an asylum seeker (EURODAC). Legal migration – national IS ECU – from 6 years. 3. National database AFIS comprises two subsystems – criminal AFIS and alien AFIS which records data separately. Data in AFIS is stored for 80 years and there is no age threshold from which the fingerprints can be taken. In CODIS, data is stored for 99 years. When an alien is taken fingerprints, the data is checked in the national system AFIS and subsequently in the EURODAC. As for the central database EURODAC, the procedure is according to the Regulation (EU) no. 603/2013 (storage for 10 years, from the age of 14).

4. According to the Slovak legislation, if a Police Officer finds out that a foreigner showed false or forged document, he/she is authorised to seize this document. The same applies to documents which was not issued on the name of the checked foreigner and which are showed by the foreigner as his/her own or if the state authority, which issued the document, proclaimed this document as invalid or stolen. At the request of the Police Officer, the foreigner is obliged to present his/her identity and his/her residence permit by presenting a valid passport and residence document. If a third-country national refuses to present these documents, he/she is committing a misdemeanour in the area of residence. He/she may be fined by 1600 EUR. Apart from this, if the person refuses to present his/her identity, the Police Officer is authorised to take this person to the police station to determine his/her identity (see 1). The Police unit and the Ministry of Foreign and European Affairs of the Slovak Republic are authorised to process copies of travel and identity documents as well as other documents presented. The foreigner is obliged to undergo fingerprinting by the Police or the Diplomatic Mission if requested during the respective procedure.

5. According to the Act on Residence of Aliens, a third-country national is obliged to protect his/her documents (alien passport and residence documents) against loss, theft, damage or abuse and report loss, theft, damage or abuse within 5 working days. Loss of a travel document not issued by the Slovak Republic may be reported to the respective district Police unit which is liable to search for it. The loss is recorded in the respective information system – national IS PATRDOC from which the information is automatically sent to the Schengen Information System. If the document has been proclaimed as lost or stolen, i.e. reported as lost stolen to the Police, it loses its validity despite the fact that it is found and marked as valid. Such a document cannot be presented as in any other Schengen Member State. There is no limitation to the number of documents which can be issued to a third-country national within a certain period of time. However, each issue is charged. In case of repetitive loss, there is higher fee. If there is a suspicion that a foreigner has abused a document, i.e. his/her actions have characteristics of a criminal act, the foreigner may be taken to the Police station to explain the cause. The following procedures depend on the individual case, kind of abuse and existing evidence.

	Slovenia	Yes	1. Fingerprinting may be used for the purpose of identification and/or purpose of verifying if the person is already in the system - check against fingerprint database. Coercive measures apply in case of non-compliance. Fingerprinting is applicable in cases of residence permit application. In the latter case the coercive measure is non-issuance of the document. 2. No age limits apply. 3. Fingerprints may be stored in the system for two years unless otherwise indicated by EU legislation. 4. Documents may be searched for in the process of identification of the person. Intensity of search depends on legal grounds. Holding of the documents is applicable in order to guarantee that the fine is paid or to prevent leaving the country. In the latter case it can be done only by judicial decision. 5. Such cases are investigated. Abused document is taken and returned to issuing authority for annulment or return to original owner, depending on the nature of the case and decision of issuing authority. No limits regarding number or time apply. Abuses are persecuted and punishable by national legislation.
	Sweden	Yes	1. a) The Swedish Police Authority (the Police) or the Swedish Migration Agency (the Migration Agency) may take a foreign national's fingerprints when the foreign national enters Sweden without being able to provide proof of his or her identity (Aliens Act, chapter 9, section 8). There is also a possibility for fingerprinting to check if the person's fingerprints match their residence permit or Schengen visa (Aliens Act, chapter 9, sections 8 b-c). b) The Police, or the Migration Agency, may also take a foreign national's fingerprints when the foreign national applies for asylum (Aliens Act, chapter 9, section 8) or otherwise applies for a residence permit (Aliens Act, chapter 9, section 8 a). c) As of now, the authorities in Sweden do not have a right to fingerprinting when checking a foreign national within the territory unless he or she applies for asylum or a residence permit, or there is reason to take the person into custody (Aliens Act, chapter 9, sections 8-8 a). There is a possibility to summon the foreign national to an interview at the Police or the Migration Agency in order to check their right to stay in Sweden/the Schengen territory. If there is reason to believe that the person would not come to the interview voluntarily, the Police can bring them to an interview without prior calling. In some cases, when the person cannot identify themselves and cannot prove their right to stay within the territory, there may be reason to take the person into custody.

		2. a) The lower age limit for fingerprinting is 14 years when a foreign national enters the country without being able to prove their identity (Aliens Act, chapter 9, section 8). b) The lower age limit for fingerprinting is 14 years when a foreign national applies for asylum (Aliens Act, chapter 9, section 8). When a foreign national applies for a residence permit, the lower age limit for fingerprinting is 6 years. In this case, the fingerprints are taken solely to be stored in an information medium in the residence permit card, which is issued if a residence permit is granted (Aliens Act, chapter 9, section 8a). c) When there is reason to take the person into custody, the lower age for fingerprinting is 14 years (Aliens Act, chapter 9, section 8). 3. The fingerprints taken according to the Aliens Act, chapter 9, section 8, are stored in a database, which the Migration Agency keeps in accordance with the Aliens Data Act (2016:27), section 14. The fingerprint data can be stored for up to ten years from registration. It is removed when the person concerned becomes a Swedish citizen or ten years from registration of the data at the latest. The fingerprints are checked against Eurodac, against the Police's fingerprint records and against the Migration Agency's own fingerprint records. For asylum seekers, according to Regulation (EU) no 603/2013, fingerprint data is collected and transmitted to the Central System of the Eurodac database. Even here, the fingerprint data can be stored for up to ten years from registration. It is removed when the person concerned becomes a citizen of an EU member state or ten years from registration of the data at the latest (article 12). According to Regulation (EU) no 603/2013, article 14, fingerprints taken of third-country nationals or stateless persons apprehended when irregularly crossing the border, are to be stored in the central system of the Eurodac database for up to 18 months, or until the person has been issued a residence document, has become citizen of an EU member state or has left the territory of the Member states. Fingerprint data taken according to the Aliens Act, chapter 9, section 8a, is only stored until a residence permit card is issued and handed over to the person concerned, or until the application for a residence permit has been settled without the person being granted a residence permit. Fingerprint data taken according to the Alien Acts, chpt 9, par. 8b-c, is not stored. It is to be destroyed as soon as it has been checked against the information stored in a residence permit card or VIS. According to the Police Data Act (2010:361), chapter 4, section 11-12, the Police has a right to store fingerprints in a database, inter alia, if this is needed to meet international obligations and otherwise for crime investigation purposes. The data stored to meet international obligations may only be stored as long as this is needed for such purposes. 4. In Sweden, the authorities have the right to search for a foreign national's passport and/or other identity

			documents for identification purposes when he or she enters the country but not thereafter, i.e. not in the situation that the authorities want to check the identity of someone who already is on Swedish territory, unless the person applies for a residence permit. If they apply for a residence permit, then the Migration Agency has the right to take and hold their passport and other identity documents. There are, however, no coercive measures to search for such documents if the person does not hand them over. When a decision is made to reject or expel a foreign citizen, the authorities also may take and hold the foreign national's passport and/or other identity documents until the decision is enforced. 5. When applying for an alien's passport or travel document, the applicant shall hand in such application personally and shall also hand in his or her previously issued passport or travel document. If it has been destroyed or lost, he or she is obliged to give detailed information on how this has happened. If it has been lost, the applicant shall also give information on which measures he/she has taken to get it back and hand in a copy of his/her report to the police on the matter. The Migration Agency has a policy not to grant an alien's passport if a previously issued alien's passport has been abused, for example by being handed over to another person for travel, or if it has been used in criminal cross-border activity such as smuggling or trafficking. If a person has lost several alien's passports in the past, a new one is usually not granted without a thorough investigation. When there is suspicion on misuse, the Migration Agency can also limit the validity area of the new alien's passport for a certain period of time, usually one year. For necessary and urgent trips, a temporary alien's passport can be issued. If a residence permit card has been lost, the applicant also shall give information in writing on which measures he/she has taken to get it back and hand in a copy of his/her report to the police on the matter. For regular Swedish passports, there are new provisions stating that a Swedish citizen only has the right to three regular passports during a five-year period and that, when a temporary passport is issued, another valid passport must always be revoked and thus cancelled in national and international databases of travel documents reported as stolen or lost. As of yet, there are no such provisions regarding alien's passports, travel documents and residence permit cards, but a recently appointed enquiry is assessing if such regulation is needed.
	United Kingdom	Yes	1. A) Schedule 2 of the Immigration Act 1971, as amended, b) section 5 of the UK Borders Act 2005, as amended, c) Schedule 2 of the Immigration Act 1971, as amended – Yes, the authorities may use coercive measure, which vary depending on the purpose for which fingerprints are being taken. Where a person has been detained or is liable to be detained officers may use reasonable force. In respect of an application for

			a residence permit, failure to co-operate may result in the residence permit not being issued, the person's leave being refused or cancel and/ or we issue a financial penalty. 2. 5. However, for residence permits the fingerprints are only stored on the document from the age of 6. 3. This is set out in the Immigration Act 2014 – fingerprints are normally stored for up to 10 years, unless the person is of risk of high harm to the UK or the person is a permanent resident. Fingerprints are deleted when the person becomes a British citizen. 4. The UK has a whole range of powers to search for a document for an illegal entrant and other immigration offender. These are set out in the guidance on Coercive Powers: overview which is available https://www.gov.uk/government/uploads/system/uploads/attachment_data/file/511251/Coercive_powers_v1.0.pdf 5. There is also a power to retain a passport or other evidence that would assist in the removal of an offender under Section 17 of the Asylum & Immigration (Treatment of Claimants etc) Act 2004 and guidance on this is available https://www.gov.uk/government/publications/retaining-valuable-documents
	Norway	Yes	1. The Immigration Act § 100 concerning fingerprints and photo was changed in 2016 to open for further use of biometrics for the purpose of identification and verification. However, the further conditions about the use, including storing, is to be regulated in the Immigration Regulations, probably at the end of this year. According the Immigration Act §100 fingerprints can be taken of all third country nationals applying for a permission in Norway (asylum, visa and all type of residence permits) and of foreigners that are expelled or rejected or are staying illegal in Norway. The fingerprints shall be stored in a national register. The fingerprints will be taken by the police when applying from Norway, and by the foreign service missions when applying abroad. However, the technical changes required to take fingerprints of all applicants are not yet in place. The Directorate of Immigration is cooperating with the national police and Ministry of Foreign Affairs in a project to develop the necessary technical changes. Thus, at the moment, fingerprints are only taken in all asylum cases, in some family immigration cases and a few other cases, f.ex when there is doubt about a person's identity. When the equipment is in place, the authorities at the border and the immigration authorities within the territory can use/check the fingerprints in order to control and verify the applicant's identity and whether the person has submitted under another identity earlier. The police can use the fingerprints in criminal cases if the foreigner has committed a criminal offence that can lead to imprisonment for more than 6 months.

2. Fingerprints can be taken of foreigners 6 years of age and older. For applications for Schengen Visa the minimum age for fingerprinting is 12 years.

3. As mentioned above, in Norway we are in the process of revising the regulations about the use of fingerprinting. At the moment, fingerprints can be stored until the foreigner has got a permit that can give grounds for a permanent permit. Nevertheless, it is a condition that the person's identity is confirmed through sufficient documentation or that he or she has become a Norwegian citizen or a citizen of a country that participates Eurodac. For rejected asylum seekers, the fingerprints can be stored until 5 years after the enforcement of the rejection or earlier if he or she has become a citizen of a Eurodac country. If not deleted earlier, fingerprints shall be deleted ten years after the last registration. In cases of national security, the fingerprints are not deleted. In the upcoming change of the regulations, the storing period will probably be significantly extended.

4. In connection with enforcement of the provisions regarding foreign nationals' entry into and stay in the realm, the police may stop a person and request proof of identity when there is reason to assume that the person in question is a foreign national and the time, place and situation give grounds for such a check. In connection with such checks, the foreign national must show proof of identity and if necessary provide information in order to clarify his or her identity and the lawfulness of his or her stay in the realm. (Norwegian Immigration Act Section 21) Upon entry, and until correct identity is registered, foreign nationals are obliged to assist in clarifying their identity to the extent that the immigration authorities so require. The immigration authorities may also subsequently impose such an obligation on a foreign national if there is reason to suppose that the registered identity is not the correct identity. A foreign national may not be required to assist in clarifying his or her identity in a manner which comes into conflict with a need for protection. Section 17 - 7 The foreign national's obligation to provide information (under section 83, second paragraph, of the Act) The immigration authorities may, when clarifying a foreign national's identity, order the foreign national to: (a) provide information on matters related to the foreign national's identity, including name, nationality, date of birth, place of birth, place of abode//whereabouts in the country of origin, civil status, family members, identity documents and travel route to Norway, (b) present a travel document or similar document issued by a public authority in

			Norway or abroad as confirmation of the foreign national's identity. A foreign national who does not have such a document in his//her possession may be required to procure it. The foreign national may also be required to assist in the procurement or issue of such document, including by allowing him//herself to be presented at a foreign service mission of the country concerned and providing such information as is necessary to have a travel document issued, (c) present documents produced by the foreign national him//herself, public authorities or others in Norway or abroad that contain complete or partial information on the foreign national's identity. A foreign national who does not have such documents in his//her possession may be required to procure them or to assist in their procurement, (d) present letters, notes, electronically stored information etc., produced by the foreign national him//herself or others that contain complete or partial information on the foreign national's identity, (e) procure or assist in procuring information from public authorities in Norway or abroad about registrations which can contribute to clarifying the foreign national's identity, (f) procure or assist in procuring information about school attendance, employment, accommodation, banking and insurance details etc., in Norway or abroad which can contribute to clarifying the foreign national's id entity, (g) present tickets, luggage receipts and the like, (h) participate in a language analysis, and (i) provide a handwriting sample to permit a comparative handwriting examination to be made.  This means that the foreigner can be left with no other choice but to provide information stored on their cell phone, PC and memory sticks, etc. or face confiscation. A foreign national who applies for or has been granted protection may not be required to contact the authorities in his//her country of origin if this may conflict with a need for protection. Nor may the foreign national be required to clarify his//her identity in any other way that may conflict with a need for protection. If there is reason to presume that the registered identity of a foreign national is not the correct one, the foreign national shall be made aware of the basis for this presumption and be given the opportunity to make a statement about this before an order is made. A foreign national who is ordered to assist in clarifying his//her identity shall be made aware of the relevant provisions and that failure to comply with such an order may constitute a criminal offence (see section 108, second paragraph (c), of the Act and section 18 - 13 of the Regulations). The foreign national shall also be made aware that providing substantially incorrect or obviously misleading information, (see section 108, second paragraph (c), of the Act), and making a false statement, (see section 166 of the General Civil Penal Code), may constitute a criminal offence. In the initial phase of the asylum registration process, the applicant is given an orientation about the consequences of providing false information and the expectation that the applicant will comply with the enquiry. 			access to their cell phone and other electronic devices with stored data. In Norway's experience, most asylum seekers provide this access. The person in question is asked to sign a consent form indicating that they have agreed to this search. FORCEFUL MEANS – SEARCHES and/ or confiscation: When there is doubt about a foreigner's identity and there is no documentation and the person in question will not provide access to their electronic devices, forceful measures can be implemented. This normally comes into play if the foreigner refuses to cooperate about clarifying their identity and the police must use methods that go against the foreigner's will. It is possible too, to investigate to what extent the person in question may have committed a war crime or other crimes against humanity which would qualify for exclusion from the realm. Pictures on a cell phone are for this reason important and can justify further investigation. The person in question can also be searched because he/she is in the country illegally. According to the Norwegian Immigration Act (Section 103, Search of the foreign national's person, dwelling or the like), A foreign national's person, dwelling, room or other place of safekeeping may be searched if there are specific grounds for suspecting that the foreign national (a) is not cooperating on clarifying his or her identity in accordance with section 21 or section 83 of the Act, giving a false identity or concealing or withholding information of material significance to a case concerning a residence permit, (b) has money or other assets that can be used to meet expenses in connection with exit which the foreign national is obliged to meet, and there are specific grounds for suspecting that the foreign national will not meet the expenses voluntarily, or (c) has travel documents, tickets or other items which may ensure implementation of the decision, and there are specific grounds for suspecting that the foreign national will evade implementation, see section 106 a. No search may be made of the foreign national's dwelling, unless the foreign national is staying in the realm in a manner that is unlawful and prohibited by the penal provision or the matter involves a search, or the foreign national has failed to comply with an order to present travel documents. Without the written consent of the foreign national concerned, searches as mentioned may only be conducted under a court decision. Where there is danger associated with any stay, the decision may be made by the chief of police or the person authorised by the chief of police. Decisions shall as far as possible be in writing and state the subject matter of the case, the purpose of the search and its scope. A verbal decision shall be committed to writing as soon as possible. Before the search is conducted the decision shall if possible be read out or shown to the foreign national. If no written decision exists, the subject matter of the case and the purpose of the search shall if possible be stated verbally. During the asylum registration process, it is common to search the applicant, their clothes and baggage looking for documents, but also their cell phone, laptop and memory sticks. more and more common that documents are digital. SEIZURE Where there is doubt about the foreign national's identity, or there are specific grounds for suspecting that the foreign national is concealing or withholding information about his or her identity, travel documents, tickets or other material items which may serve to clarify or prove identity, may be seized. The same shall apply where there is doubt about previous whereabouts if this has significance for the right to stay in the realm. Where there are specific grounds for suspecting that the foreign national will evade the implementation of an administrative decision, travel documents and other items that can document the foreign national's identity may be seized. Correspondingly, tickets and money or other assets may be seized to meet expenses which the foreign national has an obligation to meet in connection with exit. Travel documents of foreign nationals whose sole basis for staying in the realm is protection against refoulement may be seized. This is particularly relevant in relation to Syrian asylum seekers who often have travel documents and are protected from return. Decisions concerning seizure shall be taken by the chief of police or the person authorised by the chief of police. The decision shall as far as possible be recorded in writing and state the subject matter of the case, the purpose of the seizure and its scope. A verbal decision shall be recorded in writing as soon as possible. Before the seizure is carried out, the decision shall insofar as possible be read out or shown to the foreign national. If no written decision exists, the subject matter of the case and the purpose of the seizure shall insofar as possible be stated verbally. When a foreign national arrives in the realm, items may, in connection with a search and in situations where there is danger associated with any stay, be seized by a police officer. The seizure shall be reported immediately to the person who otherwise makes decisions concerning seizure. If no written decision exists, the subject matter of the case and the purpose of the seizure shall insofar as possible be stated verbally. If the seizure is upheld, a decision shall be recorded in writing. If the police do not have the capacity to make a thorough search at the time, or a quick search indicates the need for a thorough search, then the item(s) in question can be seized (Immigration Act § 104). If the foreigner refuses to accept the confiscation of his/her possessions, then the items can be seized.

5. Norway is not able to provide an exhaustive response to this question, but we refer to regulations about recurring loss of a passport (Norwegian Passport Act § 5 3.paragraph, letter e, and § 7 1.paragraph letter e; § 12 6. paragraph); which allows the authorities to refuse to issue a new passport if the passport is not kept in a safe place by the passport holder, or if it is found in someone else's property. The law stipulates that a passport can be reissued with limited validity under special circumstances even if previous passports

		have not been well taken care of. Each case has to be evaluated separately and if it is determined that the passport holder could not be held responsible for loss of the passport, a new one can be issued. Most cases are more closely investigated since experience has shown that explanations can sometimes easily be disproven which can lead to refusing to issue a new passport, or to withdrawing an already issued passport. If the passport holder is unable to provide a satisfactory explanation for loss of the passport, the following guidelines apply: □ If a person has reported loss of their passport twice in a ten-year period, the passport holder will be sent a written warning that any further loss could possibly lead to sanctions in the form of reissuing a passport with a short period of validation or even refusal to reissue a passport. The warning would also be noted on the passport renewal application. □ If a person has reported loss of their passport three times in a ten-year period, the authorities should consider whether there are grounds for refusing to renew the passport or if a new passport should be issued, that it only be valid a limited period of time, for example, 3 years. In these cases, previous reported loss of passport (above and beyond the 10-year period) should be taken into consideration as well. Should a new time-limited passport be issued and this too is reported lost, a new application for a passport replacement shouldn't be issued for at least three years. If it is clear that the intended use of the passport has been abused, a new passport should not be issued for five years from the time the abuse took place.
